This book features a cast of truly horrible children, from triplets that turn into giant earwax, boogey and bellybutton fluff, to a boy who is so boastful that his head explodes.

Create Your Own 'Worlds Worst Child' Character

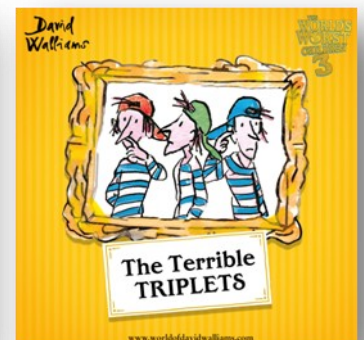

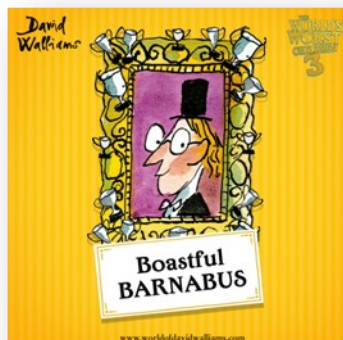

Write your own story about the worst child you can think of.

David Walliams uses alliteration for each of the children's names in the book, Definition of alliteration: the repetition of usually initial consonant sounds in two or more neighbouring words or syllables (such as wild and woolly, threatening throngs)*

- Start by thinking of the name of your character.
- Then think of another word starting with the same first letter to describe your character. See the character names/chapter titles from this book as examples: Terrible Triplets, Tandy's Tantrum, Boastful Barnabus, Fanny's Funny Faces, Hank's Pranks, Honey the Hogger, Vain Valentine, Bonnie Bossypants, Walter the Wasp and Kung Fu Kylie.
- Write your short story about a terrible thing your character did.

See the templates on the next pages to help plan your story.

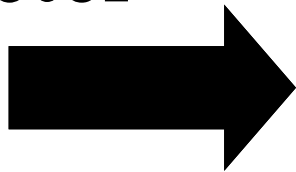

Use the sheets to make notes and ideas for your character and story. Then use the notes to expand on your ideas.
